GANG OF OUTLAWS IS VIRTUALLY ANNIHILATED

U. S. Troopers Give Them a Warm Welcome; Three Are Known Killed

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless)

EL PASO, Tex., July 31.—A detachment of Carranzistas reinforced the 8th Cavalry late today. Three outlaws are known to have been killed and two escaped.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 31.—

Col. Herbert J. Bloch of the 13th Cavalry, and the men of the 13th who were with him in pursuing the fleeing Villistas after the raid at Columbus, N. M., have been commended for prompt valorous action in repelling and pursuing the bandits.

EL PASO, Texas, July 31.—A gang of Mexican bandits which crossed the border near Fort Hancock in the early hours of this morning received a hot welcome from a detachment of cavalry on guard near the spot where the outlaws entered American territory. The gang was virtually wiped out but in the encounter two Americans were killed and one wounded.

The killed are Pvt. John Twomey of the 8th Cavalry, and Robert Woods, a customs inspector, who was on duty at this point and in the path of the band on horseback. Sgt. Lewis Thompson of the 8th Cavalry was wounded.

The slain place five miles above Fort Hancock. The band, which was about 200 strong, was reported to have been as the 8th Cavalry opened fire. It is believed that five have been killed and it is known that very few escaped.

JAPANESE SHOTS WOMAN, THEN SELF

Both Taken to Emergency Hospital; Woman Worst Hurt; Booze and Jealousy Believed to Have Been the Cause

Jealousy, booze and the indiscriminate shooting of firearms are ascribed as causes of a tragedy at noon today when Takashi Hagaki, Japanese, shot Singyee Tumi, a country woman, three times at her home near the corner of Queen and Ward streets and then tried to kill himself. Both were taken to the emergency hospital and will probably live.

A frenzied Portuguese woman noted the police of the shooting by telephone and when the officers in the audience arrived, Hagaki had barred the doors. When the police stormed the place he threatened them with his revolver, but a tap on the head from Policeman David Lohi threw him off his guard and Policeman David Kamachia finished the fight.

The pistol employed is of the cheap variety, a .38 caliber, but as dangerous as a more expensive weapon. Apparently four shots were fired, one striking the woman's elbow, two lodging in her back and the last grazing the shooter's ribs.

The woman says the two have lived together for some time, but recently separated "because it was not proper,"
